Commissioner John F. King
Georgia Office of Commissioner of Insurance and Safety Fire
2 Martin Luther King Jr. Dr. West Tower, Suite 703
Atlanta, GA 30334

Dear Commissioner King:

Recent reports have renewed concerns that bad actors in the insurance industry may attempt to defraud victims of Hurricanes Helene and Milton by cheating policyholders out of fair insurance claims.¹ We are writing to you, as well as your counterparts in all the hardest hit states—Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina—to request that you advise all insurance providers in your jurisdictions to preserve documents and communications related to estimates of loss and claim payouts. We also request that you provide a briefing on your ongoing efforts to protect residents in your state from dishonest insurance practices.

Last month, CBS's 60 Minutes aired a report featuring testimony from insurance insiders describing how, in the wake of Hurricane Ian in 2022, insurance carriers altered damage reports, misled homeowners, and “cheat[ed] them” out of “70%, 80%, or 90% of their claim.”² Although the report focused on Florida, there is evidence that these fraudulent practices extend to six different states, according to an attorney representing insurance industry whistleblowers.³ 60 Minutes' report echoed findings by the Washington Post that found that victims of Hurricane Ian in Florida received payouts reduced by “45 to 97 percent” after insurance companies slashed damage estimates made by field adjusters.⁴ As an official from an insurance industry association admitted: “If a company intentionally changes the estimate to not pay out a loss, that could be considered fraud.”⁵

These concerns regarding fraudulent and dishonest industry practices persist in the wake of Hurricanes Helene and Milton. Earlier this month, Florida issued an emergency rule to “protect Florida consumers against unfair and deceptive acts in the Florida property insurance market” and to “reduce post-storm fraud.”⁶ Reports have revealed that insurance companies have already denied more than 37,000 claims in Florida alone.⁷

As communities in Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina attempt to recover from the destruction and devastation wrought by Hurricanes Helene and Milton, we must ensure that they are not further victimized by insurance companies refusing to fairly pay out claims.⁸ There is a decades-long pattern of bad actors in the insurance industry—both large and small insurers—shortchanging customers in the wake of natural disasters.⁹ As the intensity and frequency of natural disasters increases due to climate change and as hurricanes reach further inland and higher elevations, it is crucial that we hold all insurance companies accountable to honoring their customers’ claims, especially in the wake of these disasters.¹⁰

In this spirit of accountability, we ask that you request insurance providers in your jurisdiction to preserve the following categories of documents regarding all claims related to damage attributable to Hurricanes Helene and Milton:

1. For any claim where the claim payout is less than 90% of any loss estimate, including any initial damage estimate, damage estimate by a field adjuster, or damage estimate by a desk adjuster:
 - a. All loss estimates and insurance adjusters' reports;
 - b. All documents and communications discussing payout amounts, loss estimates, or insurance adjusters' reports;
 - c. All documents and communications discussing modifications or changes to any loss estimate or insurance adjusters' report; and
 - d. All documents and communications identifying the individual or individuals responsible for any modifications or changes to any loss estimates or insurance adjusters' report.
2. All documents and communications related to any claims denied or reduced by more than 10% because damages were designated as being the result of a flood event rather than a wind event.
3. All documents and communications related to guidance regarding claims adjudication, including guidance to employees, contractors, and third parties.

In addition, we request that you provide a briefing to Committee staff regarding your ongoing efforts to protect victims of Hurricanes Helene and Milton from dishonest insurance practices, including, as relevant:

1. Oversight you are conducting during the hurricane recovery process, such as spot checks on the claims adjudication process;
2. Inspections and field exams of ongoing insurance adjustment procedures you are conducting to ensure that fraudulent practices are identified as they occur; and
3. Regular reports you are requiring insurance companies to provide regarding the number of claims received and their status.

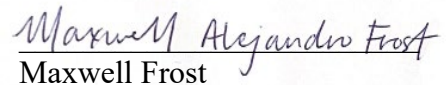

To make arrangements to schedule a staff briefing, please contact Committee staff at (202) 225-5051 by November 18, 2024.

The Committee on Oversight and Accountability is the principal oversight committee of the House of Representatives and has the broad authority to investigate "any matter" at "anytime" under House Rule X.

Thank you for your attention to this important and urgent matter.

Very truly yours,
